

Overall

- Everyone was interested in an application that was easy to use
- People wanted an application that allowed others to actively take part in the planning process
- People tended to either use one application or several to plan events based on the type of event that was occurring
- Free application would be best
- Most people plan events via text or by sending out calendar invites

Design Comments

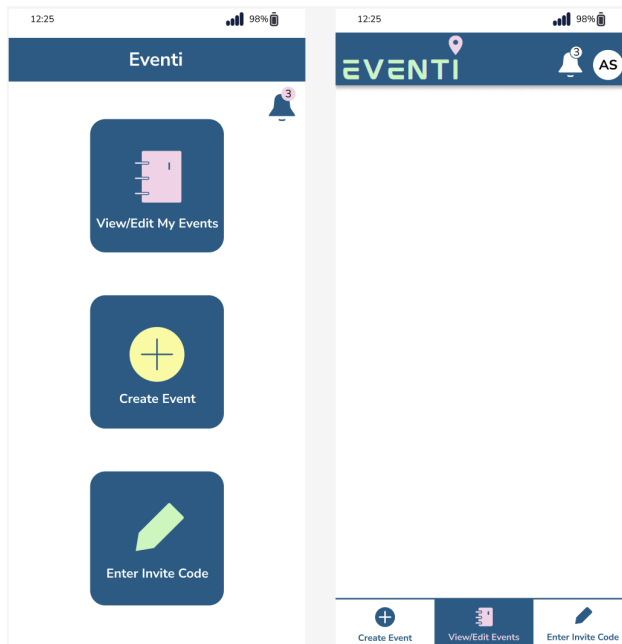

- Inclusion of a navbar so users always know where they are
- Possible inclusion of a back button (may be able to simply use system UI)
- Move the create event button to be the first on the left
- Remove the map icon and simply make it part of the event details

Functionality Comments - Thoughts

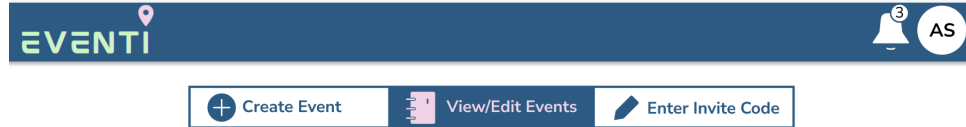

- Implementation of categories to group events by type
- After the implementation of a login, have the person's initials appear next to the event they created so if people have questions about a specific event they can follow up with that specific person
- Add a notes section to describe further details?

Major Changes

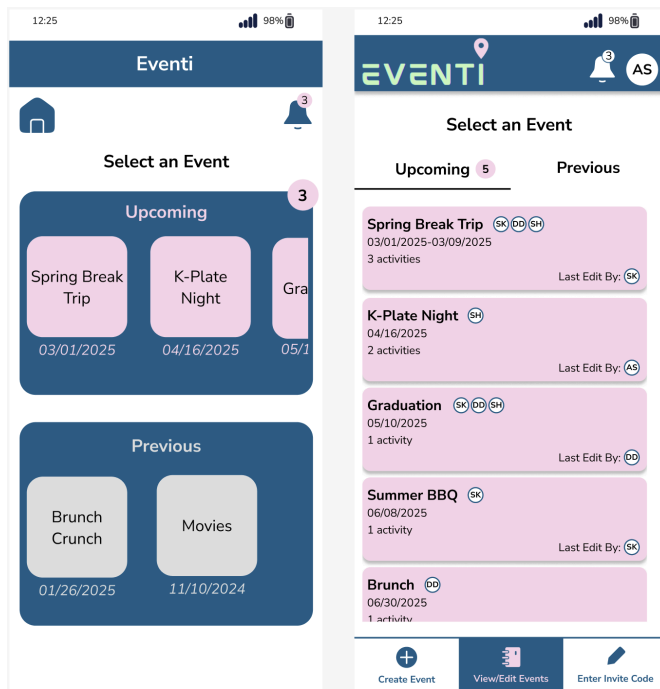

Navigational Layout

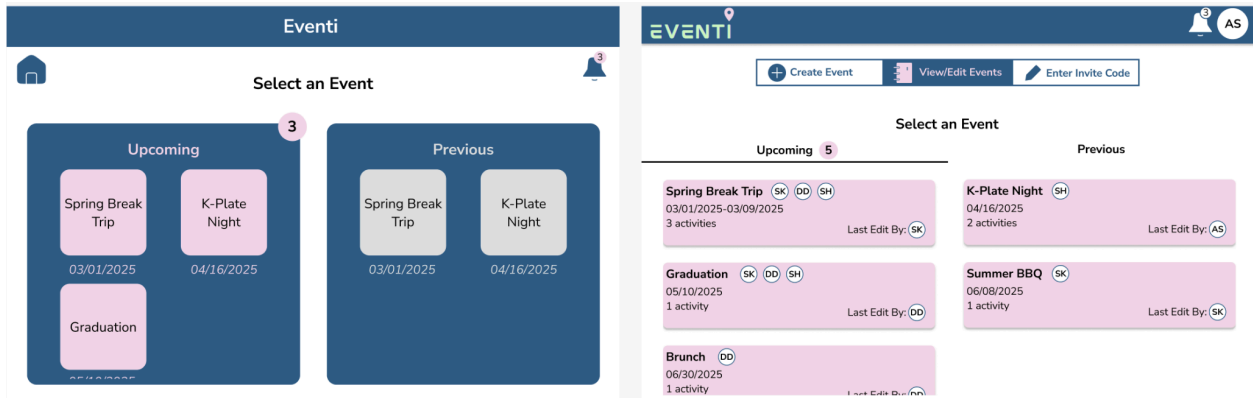

- Moved navigation to bottom so that it's always visible rather than having users return to the home page
- Changed as a user mentioned forgetting the options available on the home page

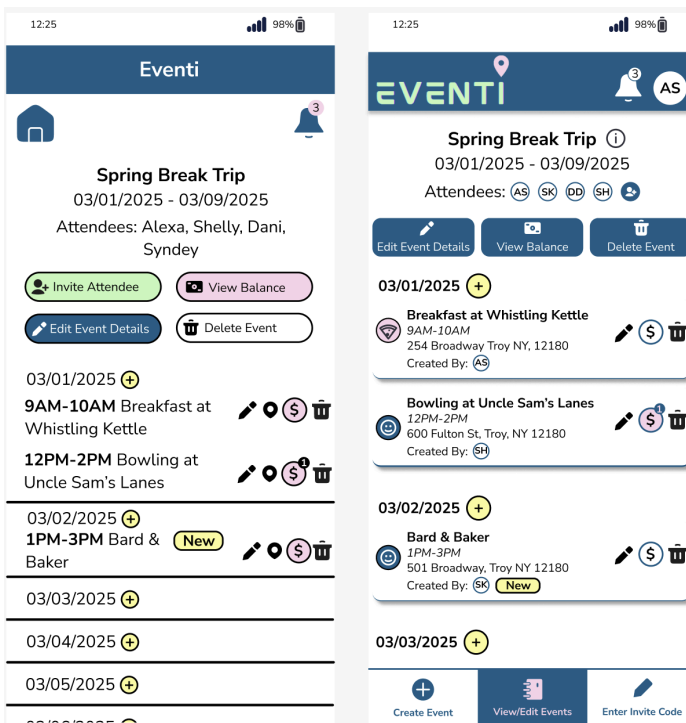

View/Edit Events

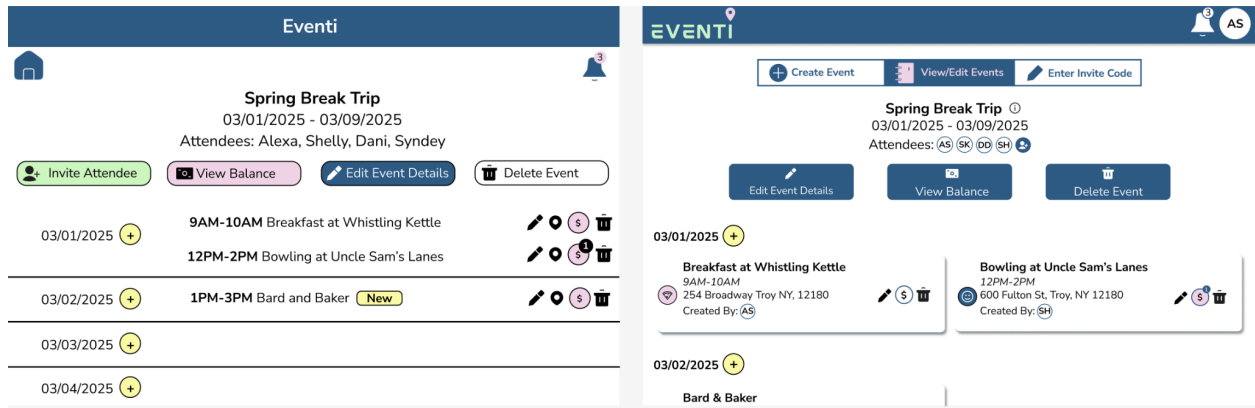

- Changed to not overwhelm users by showing upcoming and previous events separately
 - Shows how many activities are in an event to distinguish between activities and events
 - Shows users who's attending and who last edited to increase collaboration

Expanded View of Event

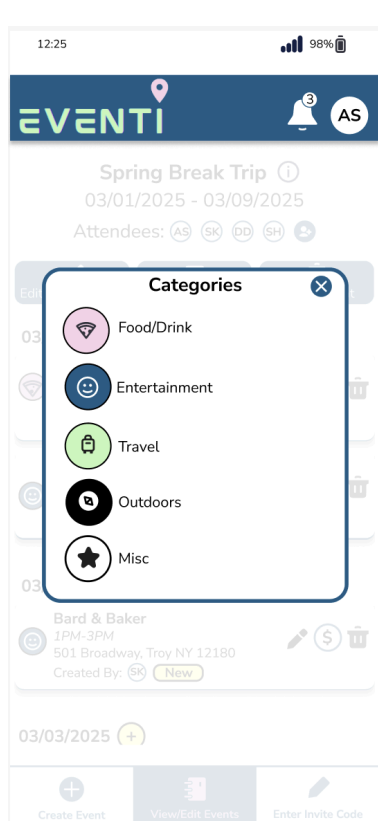

- Shows attendees via their icon rather than names to reduce text load at the top
- Four buttons reduced and changed to be a singular color to not overwhelm the user with too many contrasting colors
- Location was moved into the body of the event rather than a separate icon as suggested by a user
- Categories were implemented as suggested by the team

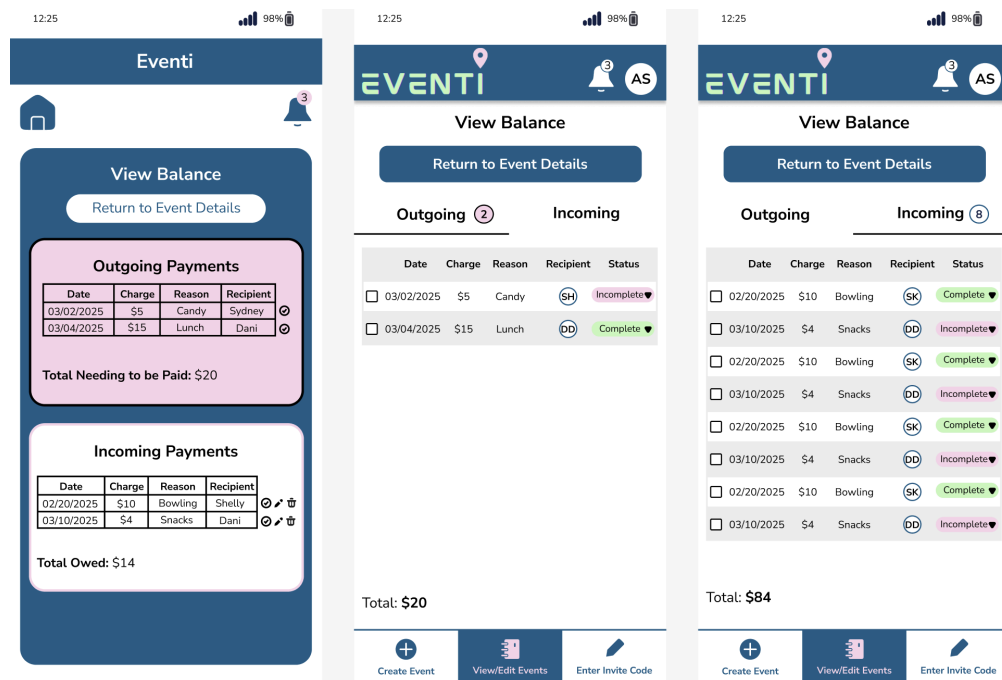

Other things that were added

- Login/Sign Up page
- Profile page
- Categories (available through i icon)
- Small stylistic change to add/edit charge and view balance pages (no one told me to do it, I just thought they looked ugly before lol)

Categories Edit
